"A FOREGOING CONCLUSION."

Under the foregoing heading the Milwaukee Sentinel makes this pleasant allusion to Mr. Morgan, who has concluded to make a democratic martyr of himself.

Mr. Morgan is a pleasant gentleman, a good business man, and consequently a shrewd and resourceful man in the politics of the State. But it will not cost the republicans a single pang to bury him out of sight, little, because it will not displease Mr. Morgan in the least to be deeply buried. So foregoes is the consciousness that even those who are condemned thus will not be able to make a show of mourning. Mr. Morgan is simply performing a quiet act which Judge Jenkins, Judge Mallory, Mr. Pratt and others see Mr. Woodford or Woodward wasn't it? have performed for their party, and which Mr. Morgan refused to perform. In a way, Mr. Morgan can afford to do this, because it is an advertisement.

A gubernatorial campaign on the part of Mr. Morgan, under circumstances shows how beautiful is the political spirit of the man. It is not every man who stands high in the estimation of his fellow citizens, whose business record is a splendid monument to his industry and financial ability, and whose only fault is his democracy, that would permit himself to be led to a political slaughter. His devotion to his party, his willingness to be its martyr for example's sake, matches the kindness and the unselfishness of the democratic candidates named by the Sentinel. But Mr. Vilas was never that way. We remember when the present secretary of the interior was better than his party in Wisconsin; when he considered it small business for so great a man as William F. Vilas to be a democratic candidate for governor; and when he thought it high time for the democratic party to be disbanded. In those days he was about as useful to the Wisconsin democracy as a paste diamond would be to a blacksmith.

But times have changed since then in Mr. Vilas's political fortunes. By an accident he has become the trusted friend of a president, and has fared sumptuously every day since the accident, and now he seems to have an enthusiastic love for the democracy of this state. Mr. Vilas has received a handsome reward for his political vanity. Mr. Morgan, like Judge Jenkins, Judge Mallory, Mr. Pratt, and Mr. Woodford, will put nothing but defeat for his faithfulness to his party. These facts show how unevenly are rewards distributed in this world of so many ups and downs.

HOW THE BATTLE IS GOING ON.

One of the brightest places in New York city are the headquarters of the national republican committee. The reports sent to these headquarters are of special interest, because they are exceedingly cheerful. There is certain success for the republicans this fall. There can be no doubt about it. The continual rush of democrats to the republican ranks, the harmony in the republican party, the intense workingmen are taking in the campaign, and the wide-spreading of protection literature, are making the campaign one of the most hopeful for the republicans seen since 1872.

In this connection it may be well to add that a well known one democrat, who accompanied Mr. Thruway to Chicago, says of him that "his meeting did harm, for it brought together one of the most disgraceful, disorderly, drunken rabbles that had ever been seen at a political gathering. The testimony of disinterested Chicago papers is to the same effect, and there can be little doubt that the character of Judge Thurman's audience in the west is of the worst sort. If he had not had to address audiences containing so many rough characters he would probably not have been led into his course now notorious utterances about the colored race, namely: 'The negro is a very profane animal,' which is about all he had to say in favor of the colored voter for whose support he is bidding."

Mr. Charles A. Russell, of Massachusetts, formerly a member of congress, says that the movement toward Harrison is as strong in New England as it appears to be in other sections of the country. He says that laboring men and professional men who have hitherto been republicans are announcing their intention to come to the support of Harrison this year. In Massachusetts these conversions are not always announced in bold and formal way, but, nevertheless, a revolution of great magnitude is going on.

Probably the greater number of conversions to republicanism are taking place in Indiana, Connecticut and New York, the states that the republicans most desire to carry. They are numbered by the thousands in these states, and the movement is strong that makes the battle sure for the republicans.

A DEMOCRATIC OPINION OF VILAS.

The Chicago News, which cheers for Cleveland and howls for free trade, turns its attention from things important national to the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. Vilas. In his speech in Milwaukee, he represented the administration in its spirit and statistics, and did it quite skillfully, so much so that the News brings Mr. Vilas in its editorial columns as follows:

"The Hon. William F. Vilas has taken the stump in Wisconsin. He has facts enough to swamp an ironclad. He is saturated with language.

"The secretary of the interior gives Vilas a bath of oratory. That devoted city can now wing eloquence from its locks. It has been steeped in a democratic dew. It has been raised on by an administration thunder cloud. Flashes of red-hot administration lightning still play around its brewery-tops. "He is florid of rhetoric. He plausis a garde of toplips to grace a turpish patch of statistics."

Good for Edmunds. It is said there was a heavy frost in Vermont on the morning of the election, but it wasn't on account of his reaching that state. In stead of bringing frost, he made a jolly speech, and said: "We must all get up early to-morrow, for to-morrow, as the girl said about May-Day, will for us republicans be the happiest day of all the glad New Year," closing with the apothegm:

"Let us go home, and if the democratic administration is not sucker to-morrow then it is to-day, I shall be mistaken."

He took occasion to close his speech in this cheerful language:

I only have this to say: I have just come from Washington for the purpose of voting the republican ticket, not because it was necessary in this state, but because I know that if the Vermonter strike us hard to-morrow as they're able to, it will beat out the last blotch that will be necessary. The information that we have is that the Senate will be in session to-morrow to consider an amendment to the proposed amendment to the Chinese exclusion bill, and that the amendment will be such an amendment against this legislation that, instead of political capital being made out of it, it would be the political downfall of the party, regarded as most at fault. Senator Teller (Col.) objected to the proposed amendment as not being of decided merit, and the object was sustained.

The debate then ramified off into a dispute between Senators Morgan and Blair as to the sincerity of the Pacific slope Senators on the Chinese question at the close of which the agreement mentioned above was made and the Senate adjourned.

Vileny are the ways of the democratic past floating out. In the Fifth congressional district in this state, Mr. Thomas H. Hudd, of Green Bay, who has been a democratic member of congress for the past three years, has been defeated for re-election by Joseph Birkenshaw of Sheboygan Falls. Mr. Hudd is a consistent democrat, an accomplished gentleman, voted for the Mills bill, and is thrown overboard. Mr. Henry Smith of Milwaukee, who is not a consistent democrat, nor an accomplished gentleman, but who voted for the Mills bill, is endorsed by the democratic state convention.

Greater than any check of ten thousand dollars in a campaign, is the following message:

BURLINGTON, Vt., Sept. 5.—Gen. Benj. Harrison: Vermont endorses your choice at Chicago by giving Dillingham a larger majority than we have ever before given to any republican governor.

CARROLL S. PAGE, Churnman.

A little four-line message like that will knock a democratic voter off his capitol crazy.

There is nothing but elation in the Democratic campaign so much as bounding republicans from office. The New York Graphic, democratic, catches the spirit of enthusiasm in saying: "The campaign is heating up and the Democracy is getting its own. Yesterday a dozen republican railway mail clerks were dropped from the rolls over at the federal building and a dozen democratic took their places. Let the good work go on."

A rattling cheerful dispatch comes from Indianapolis to the Chicago Times, a paper pleading for the election of Cleveland. It is not cheerful for the democrats, but mighty so for republicans. It describes the grand Harrison procession, and then says that republicans are ready to bet that Indians will go 50,000 majority for Harrison.

They call Mr. Vilas's Milwaukee speech weak. It must be remembered that all democratic speeches are weak this year. All speeches not founded on facts cannot be anything else than weak.

THE NEGRO IS A PHYLIC ANIMAL.—Thurman's speech at Port Huron.

Thus is a part of the democratic platform, although it does not appear in the published document.

The democrats are doing more equitably now than cheering. It is not more pleasant to squirm than to cheer, but sometimes people have to do a great many unpleasant things.

"The start it never sets in the political horizon of the Union," is doing some mighty bright shining over the result in Vermont.

"Pearls" is the purest and best soap ever made.

A QUORUM STILL LACKING IN THE SENATE.

The Chinese Exclusion Bill Sure to Pass That Body—Senate on the Ratification Bill in the House—Other Capital Gossip.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Senator Hoar (Mass.) offered a resolution in the Senate calling the attention of the President respectively to the resolution of the Senate of August 23 requesting him to continue his efforts to secure a quorum of all senators to meet to consider the Chinese Exclusion bill.

Washington, Sept. 7.—The Senate voted to adjourn.

Another attempt was made to pass the Chinese Exclusion bill. The vote was unanimous—so, 37, two less than a quorum. Upon a call of the Senate thirty-nine senators—exactly a quorum—responded. Senators Sherman and Hoar explained that they had refrained from voting because they thought the Senate should delay final action until the first of October, when the full Senate could be called together.
